V. STATEMENT OF FACTS

17. On or about June 26, 2014, Defendant hired Plaintiff to work at its East 63rd Street studio location in New York City.
18. Throughout his employment, Plaintiff performed his job duties in a satisfactory manner, earning multiple pay raises and promotions during his tenure with Defendant.

19. Prior to SOULCYCLE employing Plaintiff, he was diagnosed, and had been receiving treatment for, Bi-Polar Disorder, Attention Deficit Hyperactivity Disorder (ADHD), anxiety, panic attacks and a sleep disorder.
20. These disabilities affect many of plaintiff's major life activities, including, but not limited to, his ability to sleep, concentrate and work.
21. Plaintiff continued to suffer from, and received treatment for, these medical conditions throughout his tenure with SOULCYCLE.
22. In or around January 2015, Plaintiff realized that his medical conditions were once again affecting his ability to sleep, and in turn, affecting his ability to arrive to work on time.
23. On or about January 16, 2015, Plaintiff advised one of his supervisors – known as Assistant Studio Managers (ASM) – of each of his medical conditions and how these conditions affected him and his ability to sleep and arrive to work on time.
24. On or about January 29, 2015, Plaintiff met with the Studio Manager (SM) and the same ASM from earlier in the month, to explain his medical conditions and how these conditions affected him and his work.
25. During the meeting, the SM and ASM offered Plaintiff a promotion to Key Holder/Manager on Duty. Plaintiff advised the SM and ASM that he needed to think about the offer and would get back to them the following day.
26. On or about January 30, 2015, Plaintiff advised his SM that he would accept the promotion if she would provide him with several reasonable accommodations because of his medical conditions. The requests included: (a) flexible scheduling allowing Plaintiff to have input into his schedule and limiting the number of opening and closing shifts; (b) regular one-on-one meetings to discuss Plaintiff's progress, goals and areas of growth to focus on; and (c) in the moment feedback.

27. Later that same day, Plaintiff's SM advised him that she had made her Area Manager (AM) aware of Plaintiff's medical conditions and requests for reasonable accommodations and that SOULCYCLE agreed to provide the reasonable accommodations.
28. With these accommodations, Plaintiff continued to perform his job duties in a satisfactory matter and in or around June 2015, SOULCYCLE promoted Plaintiff again, this time to a position in its corporate office as the East Coast Programming Coordinator.
29. In or around July 2015, Plaintiff advised his new managers of his medical conditions and the reasonable accommodations that were provided to him while working in the studio.
30. Also in or around July 2015, Defendant's West Coast Programming Coordinator quit and Defendant assigned these job duties and responsibilities to Plaintiff.
31. Later in or around July 2015, one of Plaintiff's managers came to his work location and yelled at him for wearing headphones while working. Plaintiff advised him that he wears the headphones because of his ADHD and other medical conditions as they help him concentrate on his work.
32. As part of the transition to the new position, Plaintiff was to be trained by the person he was replacing; however, this training hardly took place. Plaintiff advised his direct supervisor of the lack of training and requested adequate training; however, the supervisor ignored his complaints and failed to provide him with training.
33. In or around August 2015, Plaintiff's direct supervisor and managers were removed from their respective positions and reassigned.

34. The Director of Business Development was assigned as Plaintiff's new supervisor and his direct report.

35. In or around August 2015, Plaintiff recognized that due in large part to the extra job duties and responsibilities and lack of adequate training, he was having a difficult time transitioning into the new role and decided that he needed to address this with his supervisor.

36. On multiple occasions, Plaintiff requested a meeting with his supervisor to address the extra job duties and responsibilities, as well as the lack of training, and other issues he was experiencing in the department; however, Plaintiff's supervisor ignored each request.

Discrimination and Retaliation

37. On or about September 23, 2015, one of Plaintiff's managers pulled him into a conference room where Plaintiff met with the manager and a Human Resources (HR) representative.

38. The manager handed Plaintiff a written warning related to his job performance.

39. Afterwards, Plaintiff met with the HR representative and advised her of his medical conditions, prior reasonable accommodations and how his written warning was likely attributed to his medical conditions – along with the lack of training. The HR representative advised Plaintiff that if he is unable to perform his job duties in a satisfactory manner, reassignment to another position was an option.

40. On or about September 28, 2015, Plaintiff met with his supervisor and manager who had written him up. Plaintiff advised them of his medical conditions in the hope that full disclosure would help them understand his situation and would result in them working together to better accommodate Plaintiff.

41. During this meeting, Plaintiff made several requests for reasonable accommodations, including: (a) permission to wear headphones (when appropriate) in order to concentrate on his work; (b) permission to take short breaks of approximately five (5) minutes every few hours; (c) permission to take a thirty (30) minute uninterrupted lunch break away from his desk (which is required under the New York Labor Law as Plaintiff worked well over 6 hours a day); and (d) one on one meetings with his manager or supervisor once every two weeks to track Plaintiff's progress and/or areas of improvement.
42. Plaintiff's manager denied each of the requests except for permission to wear his headphones when appropriate and permission to take short breaks every few hours.
43. Despite most of Plaintiff's requests being denied, Plaintiff's performance improved significantly.
44. Within a couple of weeks of meeting with the HR representative and manager, two new employees were hired and given the same job title as Plaintiff – Programming Coordinators.
45. Upon information and belief, the two new Programming Coordinators did not suffer from a disability nor had they requested any reasonable accommodations or medical leave.
46. The new Program Coordinators were allowed to work directly with Plaintiff's manager and received training that Plaintiff did not receive but had requested on numerous occasions.
47. On or about October 19, 2015, Plaintiff's manager assigned Plaintiff a voluminous and time-consuming project, in addition to Plaintiff's regular job duties and responsibilities.
48. The project involved coordinating every holiday vacation request from instructors at SOULCYCLE studios throughout the country.
49. Plaintiff worked every day, including nights and weekends, to finish the project on time.

50. On or about October 28, 2015, Plaintiff emailed the report to his manager as instructed.
51. Later in the day, Plaintiff's supervisor and two managers approached Plaintiff at his desk and began yelling at him, accusing Plaintiff of not communicating effectively and not getting the project finished on time.
52. Their actions caused Plaintiff to suffer humiliation, exacerbated his anxiety and caused him emotional distress.
53. On or about October 29, 2015, Plaintiff emailed the HR representative he had met with about a month before – and had continued communicating with – to discuss the harassment he experienced the day before and the ongoing harassment and discrimination he had been experience since the September 28, 2015 meeting.
54. The HR representative scheduled the meeting for the following week; however, she later rescheduled the meeting for November 12, 2015.
55. The ongoing stress and harassment Plaintiff experienced during the last few months began to exacerbate his medical conditions. On or about November 3, 2015, Plaintiff felt ill and called out sick, using one of his available sick days.
56. Plaintiff returned to work the next day. While at work, Plaintiff noticed that he was feeling strong and obvious symptoms of his medical conditions.
57. Plaintiff immediately emailed the HR representative requesting a meeting with her; however, he did not hear back from her, so he immediately contacted his psychiatrist.
58. Based on his psychiatrist's advice, Plaintiff then went directly to the HR representative's office and requested medical leave due to his documented medical conditions. Plaintiff even suggested a modified work schedule or telecommuting as potential options.

59. The HR representative then left her office and returned with Plaintiff's supervisor. They then advised Plaintiff that he was fired and that it was his last day at SOULCYCLE.
60. Plaintiff asked if he would have been fired had he not come to ask for medical leave, to which the HR representative responded that he would not have been fired.
61. Based on the foregoing, Defendant has discriminated against Plaintiff because of his disabilities or perceived disabilities.
62. Based on the foregoing, Defendant also retaliated against Plaintiff for his attempt to exercise rights protected under the FMLA.
63. Defendant's discriminatory behavior has caused Plaintiff to suffer loss of past and future earnings, benefits, caused him to suffer humiliation, embarrassment, duress and exacerbated his disabilities.
64. Defendant's discriminatory behavior displays an ignorance of the requirements of the ADA, FMLA, NYSHRL and NYCHRL, and was in reckless disregard for Plaintiff's protected rights.

FIRST, SECOND AND THIRD CLAIMS FOR RELIEF
(Disability Discrimination –ADA, NYSHRL, and NYCHRL)

65. Plaintiff repeats and realleges each and every allegation contained herein.
